

Taz's Home

My husband and I wanted to send an update (and pictures!) on Taz & Max who we adopted this past weekend. They are doing great! They were really shy the first day and a half, hiding under the bed or coffee table; but now they are out and running around the house. Maz woke us up the second night by rubbing his face all over ours, purring, and meowing. He had had enough hiding and was ready for some loving. Now, he is my little lovebug; he loves to cuddle and rub his face against mine. We're still working with Taz who is much shier, but yesterday he started letting us pet him, and he's hiding less and less every day. We know he just needs some time to get used to us and his new home. Both Max and Taz love each other and continuously run around the house, and play fight. These two are such a joy to us and are just what we wanted/needed! Thank you all so much for taking care of these two babies until we found them! We will continue to send updates and pictures.

Just wanted to send you guys another update on Max & Taz. They are both doing wonderfully, and growing like weeds. Taz is huge! Taz has really come out of his shell since we adopted him and he is Mommy's lap-kitty now. Max was the lap-kitty first, but now he is much more independent and does things his way. He loves rubbing his face on ours and greeting us at the door in the evenings, but he's got too much energy to stay still for long! He plays non-stop or he sleeps so hard is like trying to wake the dead. Taz is much more even keel and lives for someone's lap to sit on. Both are a joy and we're so happy to have found them. Enjoy the pictures!
